"Great Mogul's Landlord, of both Indies King,
Whose self-admiring fame doth loudly ring;
Writes fourscore Years, more Kingdoms he hath right to,
The Stars say so, and for them he will fight too:
And though this worthless Age, will not believe him,
But clatter, spatter, slander, scoff, to grieve him;
Yet He and all the World in this agree,
That such another Toole will never be."

Those Swanlike notes, sung so inspiredly to thy untimely fall, proves most exact Lines drawn not from Life; but thy swift Tragedie Showes but thine owne Soules Prophecie in Act
Thy Name, and Vertues, live, To kill thy Mould was all Imprisonment; and Poyson could.

But thy more heavenly-Self from double chaines still free (at once), Thy Body, and the Tower In that Supreme unpartiall Court remains where nor Ambition, Envy, Lust have power, Redeem'd from poysonous plotts from Witches charmes from Westons & the Apothecaries Storme. WB

The Guift of Tongues being of much precious merit,
By which, Man, mainly, differs from a Beast,
And all rare Knowledge richly is increast,
How much to our Industrious Ricraft, then,
Is due, for his great Paines and vsefull Pen:
Who, thus, hath made so Copious a Collection
Of th' Orient Characters, for fair Direction
To learn those Tongues, A Work most Excellent,
